What life was like in America when Virginia McLaurin was born 106 years ago

By Lindsey Brown

This is the National Building Museum in Washington DC, as it looked in 1909

Virginia McLaurin, who's 106 years old, has fulfilled her dream of going to the White House.

She even got to have a dance with the president. "I tell you, I am so happy," she told President Obama.

"A black president, yay, and his black wife."

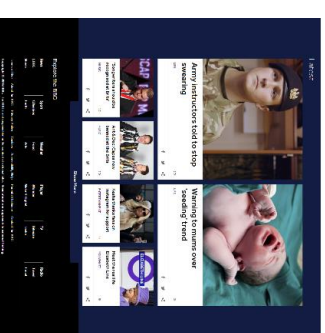

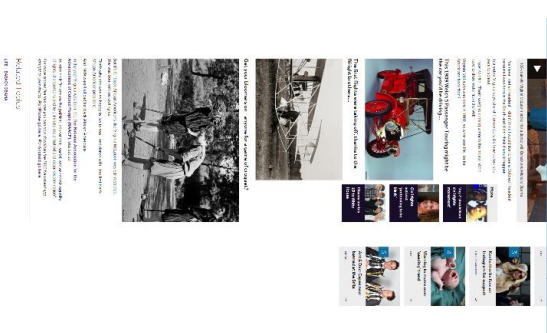

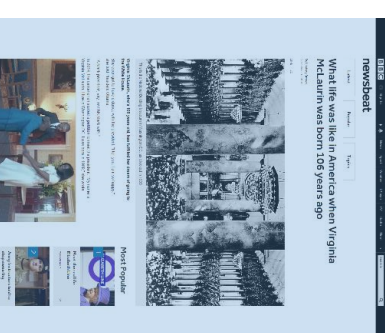

In 2014, the centenarian started a petition to meet the president. "My name is Virginia McLaurin, I live in Washington DC. I was born in 1909," she wrote

In 2014, the centenarian started a petition to meet the president. "My name is Virginia McLaurin. I live in Washington DC. I was born in 1909," she wrote.

106-year-old Virginia McLaurin broke into a dance with Barack and Michelle Obama

"I've never met a President. I didn't think I would live to see a Colored President because I was born in the South and didn't think it would happen.

In a video Virginia says she still remembers the time before she went to school.

"I was so little. [There was] no running water in the house. We'd have to draw water from the well!"

Virginia McLaurin was born in 1909, so what was life like for Americans back then?

What was life like in America when Virginia McLaurin was born 106 years ago? In 1909, the country was still recovering from the economic devastation of the Panic of 1907. The average annual income was just $1,000, and many families lived in poverty. The South was still a place of segregation and discrimination against African Americans. For a young girl like Virginia McLaurin, life was a struggle.

But life for black African Americans like Virginia McLaurin was still restricted. She was born with no civil rights. That's why she was so happy to live to see - and dance with - the first black African American president.

And 1909 wasn't all bad for black African Americans.

In the year Virginia was born, the The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), was set up.

Its mission is "to ensure the political, educational, social, and economic equality of rights of all persons and to eliminate racial hatred and racial discrimination".
